EIGHTY SECOND COMMENCEMENT

Dr. Nathan C. Schaeffer Makes Address to Forty Two Graduates of Gettysburg College. Honorary Degrees Conferred.

Forty two young graduates received their diplomas at the eighty second annual commencement of Gettysburg College in Brua Chapel this morning.

The address to the class was made by Dr. Nathan C. Schaeffer, State Superintendent of Public Instruction whose theme was "Truth". Dr. Schaeffer's address was of the earnest, forceful character, which always marks his public utterances.

Dr. Carl G. Schulz, announced as the commencement orator, was prevented by illness from attending.

Immediately upon the conclusion of the address the diplomas were presented by President Granville as the graduates marched across the tastefully decorated stage.

The conferring of degrees was conducted in the usual manner, Dr. Philip M. Bikle, dean, presenting the candidates to President Granville who awarded the degrees and diplomas, Prof. Clyde B. Stover placing the appropriate hood.

The degree of Doctor of Laws was given to Prof. Carl G. Schulz, superintendent of public instruction in the State of Minnesota; and to Dr. McCluney Radcliffe, a prominent surgeon connected with the Wills Eye Hospital, Philadelphia.

The degree of Doctor of Divinity was given Dr. L. L. Uhl, of Cambridge, Massachusetts, a retired missionary from India; to Rev. John T. Huddle, of Washington, D. C.; and to Dr. Philip M. Bikle, of Gettysburg. Dr. Bikle was presented for his degree by Prof. A. R. Wentz.

The degree of Doctor of Literature was conferred upon Prof. Charles H. Huber, of Gettysburg; and the degree of Doctor of Science upon Dr. William J. Gies, of Columbia University, New York City.

The Master of Arts degree was conferred upon Miss Virginia Beard, of Gettysburg; and the Master of Science degree upon Dr. Clifford C. Hartman, of Pittsburgh.

The salutatory was given by John Ward Fisher and the valedictory by Spurgeon M. Keeny. The college hymn, "Blessing and Honor and Glory and Power" and "Ein Feste Burg" were sung by the audience.

Honors and prizes not already made public were announced as follows:

General Final Highest Honors, Spurgeon M. Keeny.

Highest Class Honors: Senior, Spurgeon M. Keeny; Junior, Charles Gruber.

An address by Dr. Granville in which he paid a special tribute to the late Dr. McKnight concluded the morning's exercises.

CLASS REUNIONS

On Tuesday afternoon the class of 1899 dedicated the Philosophy room in Glatfelter Hall to the memory of Rev. J. H. Straw, a former member of the class who died a martyr to the cause of missions in Africa. A memorial tablet was unveiled and several addresses were made. The class banquet was held at Hotel Gettysburg in the evening.

The class of 1889 celebrated the twenty fifth anniversary of their graduation this week. Their banquet was held at the Eagle Hotel on Tuesday night, seventeen of the class being here for the event.

Without any formal notification, about twenty members of the class of 1909 returned to celebrate their fifth year of graduation and enjoy an informal supper.

The class of 1874 held a banquet in celebration of the fortieth anniversary of their graduation at the Eagle Hotel on Tuesday evening. A very large proportion of the membership was present and the class, which contains many men who have attained prominence, observed the occasion in a fitting manner.

The tenth anniversary of the graduation of the class of 1904 was observed with a banquet at the Eagle Hotel Tuesday evening. Twenty members, three ex-members, seven wives of members and four children made up the party of banqueters. The class is preparing to give to the college a wall from the main gateway to The Tiber. It will conform in architecture to the gateway.

The reception by President and Mrs. Granville at the White House on Tuesday evening was very largely attended. The college orchestra played during the evening. Other events were a dance given by the Phi Delta Theta fraternity in their house and banquets by other fraternities, Phi Kappa Psi banqueting at the Eagle Hotel; Phi Gamma Delta in their house; Sigma Chi and Alpha Tau Omega at Hotel Gettysburg.

The alumni collation this afternoon finished the formal exercises of the week.

MARRIED ON ANNIVERSARY

Twenty Five Years after Dr. McDowell Graduates his Daughter is Married in College Church. Ceremony this Afternoon.

On the twenty fifth anniversary of the graduation of her father from Gettysburg College, Miss Laura B. McDowell, of Baltimore, and Cecil K. Lyons, of Worcester, Massachusetts, were married at four o'clock this afternoon in College Church by Dr. S. J. McDowell. A number of the members of the class of 1889 to which Dr. McDowell belonged were special guests at the wedding.

Dr. McDowell was a resident of Gettysburg from 1885 to 1892 and was a member of College Church at that time, his daughter being a pupil in the primary department of the Sunday School. It was her desire to be married in the church where she had received her first religious instruction.

The bride carried a large bouquet of daisies and her sister, Miss Miriam McDowell who was the flower girl, also carried daisies. Miss Lois Conrad, of New York City, was bridesmaid, Mr. Lyons' best man was prevented from attending on account of his studies. The wedding march was played by Mark K. Eckert.

After spending a day here Mr. and Mrs. Lyons will return to Worcester where Mr. Lyons will receive his doctor's degree from Clark University. He has been studying at Oxford University, England, for the past three years as a Rhodes Scholar and will next fall become one of the faculty at the Central State Normal School, Mount Pleasant, Michigan.

Dr. McDowell, father of the bride, is secretary of the Lutheran Board of Home Missions and on Tuesday received the news that he had been awarded the degree of Doctor of Divinity by Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio.

SIMON—LITTLE

Martin Henry Simon, son of Mrs. Louis Simon, York, and Miss Minnie May Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Little, of Gettysburg, were married Tuesday morning in St. Mary's Catholic church, York, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. George J. Breckel, pastor. The bride wore a blue traveling suit and was attended by Miss Katherine Sauter, and the best man was Frank Snyder. Mr. and Mrs. Simon left for Philadelphia and Atlantic City, where they will spend some time. On their return to York they will reside at 237 Prospect street.

TO MAKE CANVASS

Fate of Town Base Ball Team in Hands of Local Fans.

The solicitors for the support of the proposed town base ball team started their work to-day and must finish by to-morrow night. On the result of their efforts depends the success or failure of the formation of a town team for this summer. The college has granted the use of Nixon Field for the games and Ira Plank will act as manager if a generous response is given the solicitors so that good material may be secured.

READY FOR CAMP

Twenty Five Scouts and their Friends to Have Outing.

Twenty five Gettysburg Boy Scouts and friends have decided to take part in the camp which will open next Monday along the Big Conewago near Dick's Dam. They will not use tents, having rented a cottage. Rev. J. B. Baker expects to be with them the entire time they are in camp.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Carroussel will be Located on Breckenridge Street.

A merry-go-round is due to arrive in Gettysburg next week to stay so long as the patronage warrants. It will be located on Breckenridge street where the one was placed last summer.

FOR SUFFRAGISTS

PENSIONS ARE GRANTED HERE

Adams County Veterans Receive Pension Awards under Recent Act. Some Veterans' Widows also to Receive Government Aid.

A number of old soldiers, as well as their widows and other persons who have been in the service of the army and navy branches of the federal government, have been benefited by recent action of the pension bureau. The following beneficiaries of Adams county have been notified as to just what action has been taken.

Magdalena King, East Berlin, granted original widow's pensions on account of her late husband, Edward King, formerly a private and sergeant in Company H, 49th regiment Pennsylvania infantry, during the Civil War, dating from December 29, 1913.

Jacob C. Smith, Aspers, formerly a private in Company I, 165th regiment Pennsylvania drafted militia, during the Civil War, increase dating from February 12, 1914.

Josephine Scott, Gettysburg, original pension as the widow of Abram V. Scott, late a private in Company E, 99th regiment Pennsylvania infantry, during the Civil War, dating from January 13, 1914.

Franklin Rickrode, York Springs, formerly a member of Company I, 87th regiment Pennsylvania infantry, during the Civil War, re-issue dating from October 28, 1911, with automatic increase up to April 17, 1916.

WON LAST GAME

College Base Ball Team Closes Season of Many Victories.

The Gettysburg College base ball team scored its final victory of the season on Tuesday afternoon before a large commencement crowd when they defeated Bloomsburg Normal School 5 to 3. The locals were much crippled by the absence of several of the regular players. During the past season Gettysburg won thirteen games, lost four and played a seventeen inning tie. Three of the teams which defeated Gettysburg, Villanova, Albright and Dickinson, were met later and the locals in every instance proved victorious. Only one game was played with Bucknell and that was a defeat. Mt. St. Mary's was beaten three times while York and Allentown Tri-State teams both fell before the prowess of the Gettysburg youngsters.

ASKS DAMAGES

Taneytown and Emmitsburg Men in Court Trial.

The case of George R. Sauble, residing near Taneytown, against Meade Patterson, a well known butcher of Emmitsburg, is on trial at Hagerstown. The case is for $5,000 damages for assault. Mr. Sauble charges that Mr. Patterson beat him so that he was a considerable sum for nursing and surgical and medical attention. Mr. Patterson contends that Sauble circulated false and slanderous statements against him and that the two met and engaged in a fracas, in which Patterson came out victorious.

BOUGHT FARM

Lerew Farm in Franklin Township Sold to Mason City Man.

The 96 acre farm of C. B. Lerew in Franklin township has been sold to H. D. Lewis, of Mason City, Iowa, on private terms. Mr. Lewis will get formal possession on August first but he will start in the very near future to erect a modern residence on the place which he intends to convert into an up-to-date fruit farm.

NO ENCAMPMENT

National Guard will Encamp as Brigades this Year.

For the first time in a long period the National Guard of Pennsylvania will not hold a bi-ennial division encampment this summer. This is the year on which such a camp is usually held but the militia will go into brigade camps instead and Gettysburg will get none of them.

RAPS PRESIDENT ON TOLLS BILL

"Great Blunder" to Foist Issue to Front, Says Tillman.

HARMFUL TO HIS PARTY

Southern Senator Fears Next House Is in Danger and Says Act "Stagers Common Sense."

Washington, June 10.—Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, gave a flash of his old-time fighting spirit over tolls exemption repeal.

He declared he would vote for repeal only because he felt his state party convention had freed him from the tolls joker in the Baltimore platform.

The senate debate for the most part followed the old lines laid weeks ago, but Senator Tillman's speech was an unusual criticism of the president.

He arraigned the chief executive in vigorous terms for bringing the tolls issue before the country at this time and endangering the chances of the Democratic party in the congressional elections next fall.

"It staggers my common sense, and I have been unable to understand just why he projected the fight."

"It is of great importance to the Democratic party to control the house at the next election, and I believe the president should have kept quiet until that election was over. It would have been the best statesmanship, as well as the best politics to have done so."

Even with a night session there is no certainty of an early vote on the first proposition to be disposed of, the so-called Simmons-Norris amendment qualifying the terms of the bill.

Senator Borah, one of the leaders of the anti-repeal forces, predicted that this amendment alone would be debated for hours.

Action within the next day or two, however, hardly can be avoided unless there are unexpected developments or an unlooked-for filibuster on the part of the anti-repealers.

Party leaders are unwilling to make a prediction of the day when a vote can be taken.

Senator Tillman's speech, which was a distinct shock to the administration forces, came at the close of a day devoted to discussion. Senator Smith, of Michigan, had finished his speech in opposition to repeal, and Senator Lewis had replied to that portion of it which charged the president with seeking to win England as an ally in the Mexican matter.

Senator Burton had spoken briefly in favor of repeal, and Senator Lippitt had explained he would vote against repeal in order to preserve American rights to exempt coastwise trade should such right exist.

"Until this issue was pressed to the front the course of Democracy had been onward and upward," Senator Tillman declared. "The opposition was hopeless and hopeless. There was wisdom in silence and it would have been golden."

"There are so many things of more importance that the Democrats ought to do, that I must say in my opinion it was a great blunder on the part of the president. The Democratic party instead of presenting a solid united front is split into contending factions."

MAN MURDERS RABBI

Shoots Woman and Kills Pastor Coming to Her Aid.

Philadelphia, June 10.—Rabbi Lewis Erschansky, thirty-eight years old, was shot and instantly killed by Thomas Burns when the former attempted to assist Mrs. Fannie Eisenbaum, whom Burns had shot and probably fatally wounded.

The shooting took place in front of the rabbi's residence, near the center of the city. When Rabbi Erschansky heard the shot that wounded Mrs. Eisenbaum he rushed out of his house to investigate and found the woman lying unconscious on the street. He was about to carry her to the sidewalk when he was himself shot by Burns who was hiding behind a tree.

Burns later was captured, but he declined to give any reason for his act. He was infuriated with the wounded woman, the police say, and they believe that she had spurned his attentions.

Paris Snowbound In June.

FIRST TRIAL PROVES SHAMROCK'S SPEED

Leaves Older Yachts Far Astern in Test Race.

Southampton, June 10.—Shamrock IV, Sir Thomas Lipton's new challenger, showed excellent form in her first race sailed in the Solent.

She outpaced the older Shamrock, leaving the trial yacht far astern. Only a light breeze was blowing and both Shamrocks carried a full spread of fair weather canvas. Beating to eastward, the challenger quickly drew away.

On the run back, with jacks and spinnakers set, the challenger took a still more commanding lead, gaining some five minutes in a four-mile stretch.

"I propose to sail the Shamrock IV to New York," said Sir Thomas Lipton. "I do not propose to ask the New York Yacht club for any further favors; that is, I will not request the privilege of towing the Shamrock. I will sail the challenger across. If she sinks, well and good, but if she wins she will win without any concessions, and the American public will grant me the honor of having won without any sympathetic violation of the deed of gift or through any favors."

MISS WILSON IS BETTER

Condition Improves After Slight Operation on Her Throat.

Philadelphia, June 10.—Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the president, was operated upon here for an affection of the throat, which, it was said, had interfered with her singing.

The operation was of a minor character, and after it was over Miss Wilson spent some time shopping. She remained with friends over night, and after an examination returned to her home in Washington.

PEACE PACT AGAIN IN SIGHT

American Plan Goes to Mexican Delegates.

CARRANZA REPLY ON WAY

U. S. to Demand No Indemnity, Despite Great Cost of Vera Cruz Occupation.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 10.—Plans for the pacification of Mexico took a spurt in the mediation race, and a working agreement between the Huerta representatives and the American delegates in the "A. B. C." conferences here is expected within a few days.

Optimism was as prevalent as was the gloom before Huerta countermanded his order for the blockade of Tampico and the halting of the rebel ammunition on the steamship Antilla.

That affairs were actually "progressing satisfactorily," as Secretary of State Bryan has been accustomed to describing the situation, was indicated by a statement made by Frederick W. Lehmann, one of the American delegates, after a private conference with Ambassador Da Gama, of Brazil, chief of the mediating envoys.

"We are getting down to the definite things in our discussions," said Mr. Lehmann. "Minister Naon has said that he thought we could get through within a few days. I hope that we shall."

Several developments have contributed to this feeling that mediation may yet prove successful. First, of course, was the clearing away of the war clouds that overhung the harbor of Tampico.

Now comes the delivery of the American pacification plan to the Huerta delegates, with the forecast that it will be welded with the plan already outlined by the Mexican delegates into a substantial form of agreement.

Then came the authoritative announcement that the United States would exact no indemnity from Mexico as a result of the occupation of Vera Cruz.

Finally word came that Carranza's belated reply to the mediator's latest note was on the way. This headed off the publication of the mediator's correspondence with General Carranza and prevented what might have been a definite break between the Constitutionals and the "A. B. C." envoys.

The Huerta government has learned through the American mediators that the United States will not ask Mexico to pay a "war" indemnity and that the Wilson administration will be content to have set up in Mexico a stable government to succeed the Huerta regime.

An intimation that the United States would not demand reparation for the losses sustained at Vera Cruz or expect to be reimbursed for the great expenditures already made in an attempt to pacify Mexico was given to the Mexican delegates soon after the conferences opened.

After a long conference between the mediators and the Mexican delegates, it was learned that the counter proposals of the United States were not entirely satisfactory, but the Mexican delegates expressed confidence that in a few more conversations the points of disagreement would be adjusted.

It was generally predicted that the peace plan would be virtually agreed upon by the Mexican and the American delegates by the end of the week.

The American proposals provide the method of transferring the executive power in Mexico City from the present regime to a new provisional government which shall in a few months conduct elections for president, vice president and members of congress.

The correspondence between the mediators and the Constitutionals is expected to be brought to an end in another day or two. The mediators are insistent on their original terms—declaration of an armistice and broadening the discussion from international to internal questions. The Constitutionals are willing to meet the mediators on a satisfactory basis as to the latter point, but they are absolutely determined against declaring an armistice.

The Constitutionals undoubtedly will have a voice in the selection of the man to be provisional president, and at least two of their number would occupy the principal portfolios of the new cabinet.

The land and educational questions are simply declarations of principles on which reforms later may be undertaken and do not commit the new government to any definite program.

BRIDE AT 105: DEAD AT 110

Paterson Woman Was Fifth Wife of Her Fourth Husband.

Paterson, N. J., June 10.—Mrs. Maria Lassaso died in St. Joseph's hospital here, and on the hospital records it was entered that she was 110 years old.

She was sent to the hospital three months ago from her little cottage in Little Falls road, New Paterson, and her husband, Anthony Lassaso, eighty-one years old, is still living there.

Mrs. Lassaso told the physicians in the hospital that when she was married five years ago to Lassaso in New York she was 105 years old and that he was her fourth husband.

When fourteen years old, Mrs. Lassaso said, she had been married the first time. Her third husband had been dead thirty-eight years when she was married to Lassaso.

Marine Reported Drowned.

Washington, June 10.—Samuel Heaton, private of marines, is believed to have drowned off Lobos Island, Mex., Admiral Badger reported to the navy department. Heaton, who was attached to the Texas, left the ship with a swimming party for Lobos Island and was seen on the reef. A search later failed to reveal any trace of him.

Uncle Sam Kind to Employees.

Washington, June 10.—President Wilson signed an executive order directing that all federal employees, wherever stationed, be required to work only four hours on Saturday between June 15 and Sept. 15 of the present year.

PROBE MYSTERY OF DROWNED GIRL

Funeral Halted to Make Second Autopsy.

Baltimore, June 10.—Interment of the body of Ella G. Winter was postponed after a demand of the girl's relatives for a further investigation of her mysterious death.

A coroner's jury had given a verdict of death "by means unknown to the jury, but presumably by accidental drowning."

After the finding of the girl's body in a creek an autopsy was held, but relatives pointed out that no examination was made of the lungs. This will be done at a second autopsy.

D. Meredith Reese, Jr., the last person known to have been seen with Miss Winter, testified at the inquest that he had taken her for a ride in his motor boat and landed her at a pier on the creek on Thursday night. He did not go to the car with her, he said, because she urged him not to do so, as he had nothing to protect him from the rain.

When her body was found by an employee of Flood's Park the girl had on the raincoat and chambray gloves which she wore when she left her home. The hat was missing.

BLAMED FOR SIX DEATHS

Mine Engineer Believed Intoxicated at Time of Disaster.

Pottsville, Pa., June 10.—The Maryland Coal company is making a thorough investigation of the killing of Henry Welcker, Joseph Selinsky, Martin Viscy, William Petrosky, Mike Smith and Thomas Novak, the six miners who, while being hoisted, were pulled over the shive wheel and plunged to their deaths on May 29 last.

The coroner's jury placed the responsibility for the accident on David Williams, engineer, who, they found, had intimated drink before the accident, alleging that the company knew of his habits.

The jury recommended that the company be strict in the use of safety devices and strictly recommended that it be careful in selecting engineers hereafter.

HOLLY MILLS SOLD

M. D. Golden, of Philadelphia, is the Purchaser.

Samuel M. Kitzmiller and wife, of Shippensburg, has sold to M. D. Golden, of Philadelphia, six tracts in Mt. Holly Springs, (formerly the Mt. Holly Springs Paper Company mill property) at a consideration not stated.

Holly folk have heard rumors and reports for some time past to the effect that this property had been sold, but nothing has been learned as to what disposition will be made of the property, or whether or not an industry will be established.

Mr. Kitzmiller paid for the real estate named $30,025.

Deep Fresh Water.

In Lake Baikal, in Asia, the extraordinary depth of more than 5,600 feet has been reached, making this by far the deepest fresh water known. It now appears that Lake Tanganyika, in Africa, may approach this depth, as Capt. Jacobs of the German navy has reported a sounding of 4,190 feet, and a Belgian officer claims to have penetrated still lower. Tanganyika's deepest bottom is at least 1,600 feet below sea level.

MEXICO A LAND OF BIG STAKES

Wonder Stories of the Riches Many Have Found There.

MINES THAT ARE LIKE BANKS

Where the Owner Can Draw on Their Resources Whenever He Pleases. One Worth $26,000 a Ton—Cattle That Just Multiply and Oil That Gushes an Endless Flood.

Mexico is the land of big stakes. That is one reason for its revolution, says the New York Times. It is also one reason why many people believe, as Senator Borah says, "If the flag ever goes up south of the Rio Grande it will never come down." The country is too rich to let go. Humboldt called it "the treasure house of the world." It is all that and more.

A man who has spent years of his life on the south of the Rio Grande and whom the stormy times of the last few years in Mexico had driven back to New York was telling about the things he had left behind there the other night and this was the burden of his tale.

He told of a subterranean lake of oil known to be 200 miles long and from fifteen to twenty miles wide, with a "gusher" that flowed more than 300,000 barrels in twenty-four hours before it was "capped" and regulated; of valleys filled with oil in that twenty-four hours, of vegetation drenched for miles around. Oil—crude oil—is worth roughly a dollar a barrel at the well.

He told of ore that assayed $80,000 to the ton and hundreds of tons of it in sight, and the eyes of the Americans who listened opened wide.

"Under Spanish rule," said the man from Mexico, "the mines of Guanajuato alone produced over $1,000,000,000 worth of silver. The mine owners made millions so quickly that one of the Spanish viceroys was forced to issue an order forbidding them from scattering handfuls of silver on the streets because it increased the number of beggars."

Offered to Pay Off National Debt.

"Well, it isn't very different in the year 1914. For instance, there's Pedro Alvarado, the owner of the Palmilla mine. He is an ignorant Indian who has no idea how much money he has nor any idea of its value. In the last few years he has built fifty churches, at least 100 schools and has given away several fortunes."

"Before Porfirio Diaz abdicated Pedro offered to pay off the national debt of Mexico. When his request was refused he asked to be allowed to pay off a piece of it anyway. When this was also refused he became indignant and gave away a fortune estimated to equal the interest on the national debt for five years."

"There's a mine in the state of Sonora which is probably the richest mine in the northern half of the republic. It has high gold as well as silver values. An engineer from Cananea was allowed to visit the mine, and the Mexican owner asked him to sample and assay a shipment of thirty-six tons of ore that were going to the smelter. The owner said he didn't think the smelter was giving him full value. He didn't care for the money, but he wasn't going to be robbed by anybody."

"The engineer assayed the ore. Then, thinking he had made a mistake, he had two other assays check his results. All three assays checked within a few dollars. That ore was worth more than $80,000 a ton. The owner used the mine as a bank. Whenever he needed money he would send a few men into it and take out a small fortune. I know that, because I was the engineer."

"Poor Men's Banks." "There are lots of creeks or streams, particularly in Sonora, where a peon or a Chinaman can make from $5 to $10 a day washing for gold with an ordinary pan. They call these little streams 'poor men's banks.'"

"You mustn't forget the cattle when you think of Mexico. Until the various armies began to eat them up the owners in the two big ranches of Sonora and Chihuahua had no idea how many cows they had. A few years ago when I was milking on the big ranch in Sonora we never attempted to buy meat. We just gave the Chinese cook a Winchester and two cartridges—only two, because he'd go hunting if you gave him more and wouldn't return—and that night we'd have beefsteak for supper. You see, these ranches were as big as the ordinary county, and as there were no fences nobody knew how many cattle there were."

"Then there are the oil fields. Nobody knows yet how rich they are, but oil experts have said that the oil fields of Mexico have greater productive power than those of California and Texas combined. There is known to exist one subterranean lake of oil that is 200 miles long and from fifteen to twenty miles wide. The greatest 'gusher' or flowing well in the world is in that part of Mexico. Before it was 'capped' and the production regulated it flowed at the rate of over 300,000 barrels every twenty-four hours. The oil rose into the air, driven by the pressure below, for nearly a hundred feet and before the well was controlled it had filled every valley and depressed for five miles around."

Not a Matter of Wages.

"No person can live properly on less than a thousand a year," says a writer. But some persons wouldn't live properly no matter how much or how little they got.

Queer Things That Turn Up In the News

At the close of a booster week in Ringling, Okla., a raffle was held, at which the prize was a four-month-old baby.

Holding a lighted match over a tank in a garage in Congers, N. Y., Harry Schuler asked, "Is this gasoline?" He was sent to the hospital.

The appendix of Frank Davis of Mount Hope, N. Y., removed ten years ago, grew again and had to be cut out a second time to save his life.

Miss Dorothy Dickson of Chicago is out to break the world's tango record. She has tangoed, according to her meter, about 9,000 miles since the beginning of the year.

VERA CRUZ SAILOR HEROES AND THEIR DEEDS OF VALOR.

Medals of Honor Asked For Eleven by Rear Admiral Fletcher.

Individual heroism in the United States navy did not pass out of being with the sailing ship, the pigtail and the "cat," according to Rear Admiral Fletcher, who commanded the landing force at Vera Cruz during the trying days and nights of mid-April. All the Decatur, the Hulls, the Bainbridges, the Prebyses, the Porters, the Farraguts and the Cushings are with the navy in the second decade of the twentieth century.

Reciting eleven sailors' deeds of valor, Admiral Fletcher has asked that they be awarded medals for extraordinary heroism. Of these eleven he reports:

"H. N. Nickerson, boatswain's mate of the battleship Utah, was slightly wounded three times and after first aid bandages had been applied took charge of a squad that built an advanced barricade under fire. He then occupied a dangerous position. He was again wounded three times. He was carried to the rear and has since had his leg amputated close to the hip."

"A. D. Somer, C. T. C., of the battleship Utah, was placed in charge of a small squad of men. His position was subject to a severe fire, and after several hours of well directed fire he silenced it. On April 22, when a general advance began, he was sent ahead to locate and silence fire from snipers."

"J. G. Harner, boatswain's mate of the battleship Florida. Ensign Lowry, in command of First company, Florida battalion, called for volunteers to go into an alleyway between the custom house and an open warehouse down which a heavy fire was being directed by the enemy. Harner responded with four others and finally succeeded in dislodging the enemy."

"Seamen H. C. Beasley, L. C. Senett and Coxswain G. Cregan, all of the battleship Florida, were mentioned for participation in this exploit."

"P. A. Decker, boatswain's mate of the battleship Florida. After Ensign Lowry had called for volunteers Decker took up a position in their rear about ten yards. When Ensign Lowry stepped back to call the ambulance party to get Schmacker's body a Mexican soldier, who had been hiding, rose up and was aiming his piece at Ensign Lowry and the five volunteers when Decker diverted his attention to himself and shot him."

"C. F. Bishop, quartermaster; J. A. Walsh, seaman; C. L. Nordseick, ordinary seaman, and F. J. Schrepel, ordinary seaman, all of the battleship Florida, are also included in this roll of honor."

WILSON'S GOLF MEDIUM GOOD

Handicap Same as For Predecessor.

Representative Oglesby Rated Best. President Wilson and former President Taft are rated as "medium good" golfers by the Columbia Country club, while Representative Oglesby of New York is rated as the best golfer in public life, the former two being allowed handicaps of sixteen strokes each over par for the course, which is 72, and the representative a handicap of only 11.

Senator O'Gorman is not rated as a golfer, his handicap being 24 strokes. Senator Bristow, who is allowed a handicap of 29 strokes, is rated as the lowest of any member of congress.

The ratings of other members of congress are: Senator Penrose, 16; Senator Sanbury, 14; Senator Walsh, 24; Senator Cummins, 17; Senator Hitchcock, 18; Senator Hollis, 15; Senator Town send, 22; Representative Fitzgerald, 22; Representative Whaley, 14; Representative Gillette, 16; Representative Kent, 21; Representative Tuttle, 24; Representative Townsend, 16; Representative Tredway, 18; Representative Woods, 16; Representative Shreve, 16; Representative Walsh, 24, and former Senator Bourne, 15.

WIZARD EDISON PAINTS FUTURE

Calls His Work Small Compared to What Will Come.

"POSSIBILITIES BOUNDLESS"

"I Don't Know Much About Electricity; Nobody Does," He Says—Present Ambitions Centered Upon Generating Vital Current Direct From Coal—Big Results From Storage Battery.

Thomas A. Edison, who in 1876 sent a current of electricity through a vacuum and thus proved that light was a form of energy, stood under a myriad of the latest improvements of his first commercial light and told experts of the electrical world in Philadelphia of the big things that are yet to be accomplished by the harnessed lightning.

"Seventy-five per cent of the electrical problems are still to be worked out," he said. "For the next generation of Edisons there are millions of things. For this Edison I should like to be able to generate electricity from coal without first changing it into steam. But it will take too long to perfect, and I am getting old."

"Electricity will come on all railroads—that is, where traffic is congested. I remember when I told Frank Thompson thirty-two years ago, when he was a vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad, that this would be true and he laughed at me—yes, laughed at me—and some of the reports about my work at that time by the railroad men who are today using electricity were the worst reports about anything that I have ever read."

Realizing Dream of His Life.

"I have been working upon my new storage battery for over five years now and believe it has reached the point where the dream of my life to see everything in the cities electrified can be realized. Four years ago I guaranteed about a million dollars' worth of these batteries to run for four years. Fully 400,000 of these have stood that test, and I am ready to increase the guarantee."

Elaborating upon the process of generating electricity from coal, Mr. Edison is quoted in the New York Times as follows:

"It will require ten or fifteen years' more work. It has taken nearly a hundred years to reach the point we have now attained."

The new method, it was explained, would ultimately eliminate boiler, engine and dynamo in the transformation of the heat produced by the burning of coal into electrical power. By the present process of making electricity, in which these three middle processes must be used, approximately 30 per cent of the original power is lost through the boiler, 70 per cent of this is lost through the engine, and only 90 per cent of the engine power is finally converted into kilowatts. More than four-fifths of the original power is lost through the intricate process, and whereas one pound of good coal should produce four kilowatts for an hour, or five and a half horsepower, only three-fourths of a kilowatt hour is derived from it.

Electrically Propelled Ocean Liners.

When asked if it was possible to estimate the percentage of power which would be saved Mr. Edison said that that could not be done at present. When the new process has been perfected to the extent that more than 20 per cent of the coal power can be made use of it will be equal to the present process, and the equipment required for generating electricity will be insignificant compared to the present equipment.

"The possibilities are boundless," he said. "I can't anticipate them. I don't know much about electricity—nobody does. We know only one millionth of all there is to be known about it."

A few of those who have made a close study of the subject say that when the new process has been developed to a sufficient degree it will be possible to propel ocean liners by electricity, thereby saving the present great waste of power necessary where boilers and engines are used and making it possible for liners to travel with a much smaller tonnage of coal.

Speaking of flying machines, Mr. Edison said:

"The secret of flying is the bee. The body of the bee weighs seven thousand times as much as the wings which propel it. When we can do this then we will be doing something. The secret of the air is that it is as rigid as steel for speed."

FORESEES EUROPE AN ISLAND.

German Geologist Predicts Great Crevasse In Ural Region.

A curious prophecy as to the eventual fate of Europe is made by a well known geologist, Herr Goebel, in one of the Berlin scientific reviews. He points out that since a certain period great crevasses have been produced on the continent and that thus Iceland and Greenland were separated from Scandinavia and a channel formed between England and the rest of Europe.

The tendency to the formation of crevasses, he adds, still exists, and the day may be foreseen when the sea will penetrate into the Ural regions and there spread from Lake Aral northward across the Kirghiz steppes to the mouth of the Obi river and the Arctic, thus making Europe an island.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

CORN SOUPS. CORN, which in the condensed form is available at all seasons, makes a nice light soup, suitable for serving with almost any bill of fare. If you do not care for one kind of corn soup try another. There are many ways of making it, as may be seen by a glance at the recipes here given:

Easy to Prepare. Corn Caramel Soup.—To three pints of stock add half a cupful of corn meal well browned in the oven, half a cupful of cream and let come slowly to boiling point. Boil five minutes. Season with salt and pepper and serve.

Royal Corn Soup.—This may be made when a chicken has been boiled. Take the broth that is left and the next day place it on the fire and add to it the remnants of the chicken meat and bones. There should be two quarts of stock. Simmer until the meat is in shreds and then strain. Flavor with a teaspoonful of salt, a little celery salt and cayenne. Add a cupful of cream and a cupful of sweet cream or rich milk.

Savory Fare.

Corn Chowder.—Take four thin slices of white bacon, two medium sized onions, one quart of milk, four potatoes one can of corn. Fry the bacon slowly to a crisp, then take it out and cut fine the onions and potatoes. Place in the fat, cover with boiling water and cook till tender. The water should be allowed to almost boil away. Before serving add one can of corn and one quart of scalded milk. Season with salt, pepper and butter. Let it boil once and serve.

A Plain or Rich Soup.

Corn Purée.—Chop canned corn fine, add a quart of boiling water and a teaspoonful of minced onion. Steep for three-quarters of an hour after it reaches the boil. Rub through a colander into a saucepan, add salt, pepper, three tablespoonfuls of butter rolled in as much flour and a tablespoonful of chopped parsley. Heat a pint of milk and when the corn mixture has simmered five minutes longer turn first one, then the other, into a bowl. Stir well and serve. Veal or chicken stock may be substituted for boiling water to make a richer soup.

WEIRD HOUSE WARMING.

Bad For the Old and Helpless Natives In Dutch New Guinea.

Concerning a peculiar custom discovered among the natives of Dutch New Guinea, this interesting description is given by A. F. R. Wollaston in the Geographical Journal: "On top of the first steep ridge we came to the first native dwelling that we had seen in the country. It was a rectangular wooden structure, raised on piles about five feet from the ground. A sloping ladder or two or three poles tied together leads to a narrow platform, behind which is the living room about ten or twelve feet square. In the middle of the floor is a square fireplace, usually lined with sand or small stones. The walls are made of split poles placed closely together, and the roof is made of the leaves of pandanus or of a palm if any happen to grow in the neighborhood. There was a mystery about that first house which we were never able to solve. It was evidently quite newly built, a small clearing had been made about it and a few banana and dracaena recently planted."

"Outside the house were a number of men, women and children, the men occupied in cooking large quantities of yams and sweet potatoes and great lumps of pig's flesh. We naturally supposed that it was a sort of house warming, as in one sense it turned out to be. The men shook their heads and pointed in a mysterious way toward the house and made the curious sign which they are accustomed to make when they talk of something disagreeable. Then they invited us to enter the house, where we found an old man sitting by the fire. He was disheveled and decrepit, but appeared by no means likely to die. He took a keen interest in our appearance and enjoyed the tobacco which we gave him."

"When we returned five days later we found the place utterly deserted and the house a blackened heap of ashes, on the top floor of which were lying the charred remains of human bones. It was impossible for any one to say five days earlier that the old man was going to die—indeed, he must have lived for months or even years. What we may imagine to have happened was this: That as he was unable to get about any longer and find his own food, his relations did not intend to support him and that the preparations we saw were really for his funeral feast, but we were puzzled by their having cremated him in a newly built house."

Braving Aerial ICINESS.

Easier For the Balloonist Than For the Man In an Aeroplane.

I am often asked why the aeroplane, which has reached at its very highest a little over 18,000 feet, brings back its aviator even from a much lower point, often almost exhausted with cold, when the balloonist floating for hours at a height of over four miles is not overcome by low temperature and hardly inconvenienced. The answer is simple. The aviator rushes upward from the earth, cutting his way in ascending spirals ever against the wind of his own swift flight and the roaring blast of his propeller.

He is the epitome of action. He is man's supreme defiance of nature's precedents. The nervous strain is something fearful as the machine claws up the side of nothingness toward a mark in the heavens, invisible yet all compelling, the mark another man has set—the altitude record. Out of sight of the waiting crowds, no longer even a dot in the sky, he may meet opposing air currents, blinding cloud banks that muffle him so that he cannot see the tips of his own wings. He may be forced to buck against adverse conditions so that he keeps circling round and round with the barograph lashed to the side of the machine scarcely moving, and then he thinks about the last man's mark and sets his teeth—and sets the mark higher in the heavens.

He may come back so stiff with cold that he cannot stir from the seat, but a good deal of it will be due to the intense nervous strain, for no one so audaciously affronts gravitation and gets away with it entirely unscathed. Meanwhile the balloonist has been "wuffed to the skies." If not "on flowery beds of ease," at least on an air mattress, with a gas bag going up in docile agreement with laws governing the expansion of gas. The carburetor freezes at a lower temperature than the balloonist's water bottles, because vaporizing liquid in itself produces cold.

But I have had water bottles freeze in a balloon often enough, and the temperature has been around zero. The ballast freezes, and instead of sending it over the side from the scoop in a fine cloud, you have to break up the stony mass with a hammer lest a chunk fall on somebody's head below. One day when we were shivering in the thickest of ulsters and drinking hot soup with a relish, we could have looked over the edge of the basket and seen the farmers in Iowa having sunstrokes in the hayfields—that is, if we had recognized either sunstrokes or farmers, for at that height a man—who is always hiding under his hat—looks like a period on this page.—Augustus Post in American Magazine.

Braving Aerial ICINESS.

Easier For the Balloonist Than For the Man In an Aeroplane.

I am often asked why the aeroplane, which has reached at its very highest a little over 18,000 feet, brings back its aviator even from a much lower point, often almost exhausted with cold, when the balloonist floating for hours at a height of over four miles is not overcome by low temperature and hardly inconvenienced. The answer is simple. The aviator rushes upward from the earth, cutting his way in ascending spirals ever against the wind of his own swift flight and the roaring blast of his propeller.

He is the epitome of action. He is man's supreme defiance of nature's precedents. The nervous strain is something fearful as the machine claws up the side of nothingness toward a mark in the heavens, invisible yet all compelling, the mark another man has set—the altitude record. Out of sight of the waiting crowds, no longer even a dot in the sky, he may meet opposing air currents, blinding cloud banks that muffle him so that he cannot see the tips of his own wings. He may be forced to buck against adverse conditions so that he keeps circling round and round with the barograph lashed to the side of the machine scarcely moving, and then he thinks about the last man's mark and sets his teeth—and sets the mark higher in the heavens.

An Old Recipe

To Darken Hair

Sage Tea and Sulphur Tarn

Gray, Faded Hair Dark

and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You clampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

The story is a direct narrative of a fancied incompatibility between a self-made, iron-willed man and the humble, home-loving wife of his early struggles.

CHAPTER III.

Just how much more freely Katherine might have revealed her aims and inspirations, Slade could not know, for at that moment the butler appeared and engaged his attention.

As the man withdrew, Slade spread wide his arms and announced grandiloquently:

"The gentleman of the water-front crowd, if you please, Mr. Wesley Merritt, the gentleman who wasn't going to darken my door, is here!"

He broke off with a loud, mirthless laugh. As well as any man who ever lived, he liked to feel the grip of his own power. He had come to the point where it was genuine satisfaction to humble men and conquer things.

"Wesley Merritt!" the senator was almost too surprised for speech. "After his abuse of you in the paper today—And Hunt! How did you do it?"

"This is the sort of thing I like," broke in Katherine, eagerly. "Oh, it's so exciting," she declared, her eyes glowing with eagerness and animation. "Oh, Mr. Slade, how did you make them kow-tow?"

Slade's reply was prevented by the brusque, excited entrance of Merritt and Hunt. The pair, angry and belligerent, strode into the room without a word. Merritt, small, wiry, energetic, was in the lead, followed closely by his shadow and echo, Hunt.

"Is it true?" he demanded angrily, before he realized that Slade was not alone. "How do you do, senator—Miss Strickland!" he exclaimed, in surprise. "Lovely home you have, Mr. Slade," he added, trying to adjust himself to the scene he had not expected.

"An astonishing rumor has reached us, Mr. Slade," he finally declared, getting down to the business of his invasion. "It concerns you, senator. It concerns every public-spirited man in the city. Is it true, Slade, that you have bought up our entire water front on which our residences—our old homes—the mansions of the city face, and that you intend building factories there?"

"Why, yes," Slade admitted, with maddening calmness.

"What?" Strickland almost shouted, completely astounded.

"But—but it can't be done," Merritt was so excited now that he stuttered his words.

"It can't be done," echoed Hunt. He was well paid for being an echo.

"I live there," Hunt added, with accumulated emphasis.

"All of us," Merritt continued, "take pride in the view along the water front. It's damnable. Why, out of common decency, man—What do you want of factories, anyway?" he demanded, completely angered and out of patience.

Slade was almost a drawl. It was so low-pitched and so provokingly calm. "Why didn't you and your associates protect your holdings?" he inquired.

"How'd we know a man with millions would come along and buy up the whole beach?" Merritt's wrath was getting beyond the control that Katherine's presence demanded.

Daniel Slade.

"Slade, if you persist in this," he thundered, "I'm going to take off my coat and hit back. My paper has an enormous outside circulation, and I'll baste you once every day. If you won't get one vote in your own town. And in one month, or less, you'll find San Francisco has a gorgeous climate."

Slade was unperturbed by Merritt's threats or Merritt's bulldozing. "All right, Merritt," he advised, good-naturedly, "go ahead with your paper, I'll take my chances."

"You will, eh?" Merritt's tone was ominous. "What sort of factories are you going to build?"

"Well," drawled Slade, coolly, "I was thinking of putting up glue factories!"

"Glue!" The one word jumped from everyone's mouth at once. "Glue!" they all repeated, and looked at each other in consternation.

"The h—l you say," then remembering himself, "I beg your pardon, Miss Strickland."

"It can't be done," Merritt went on. "You can't build glue factories here," and he emphasized every word with an angry shake of his finger.

"By God, you—"

He broke off as he saw Bob Hayes stride into the room. Hayes, as Slade's lawyer and almost a member of the family, had the entree to the house at all times.

"Here's my lawyer," remarked Slade, dryly, "ask him."

"Of course it can be done," Hayes informed them, convincingly. "It's perfectly legitimate."

Then, as if to dismiss a perfectly obvious subject, he turned to the girl, who had been enjoying every point that Slade had scored.

Katherine's eyes lighted with warm welcome. It was the first time she had seen Hayes since she had returned. He was the man she had once wanted to marry, once before her father had given her the choice of Hayes or a finishing school in Paris and a tour of Europe. Now she greeted him with cordial friendship, but with none of the sweet tenderness he might have expected from her. Once she had looked up into his eyes and thought him a god. Now, her eyes blinded by the glare of ambition, she saw only a good looking chap, a struggling lawyer, a man who hadn't made any particular mark in the world. She returned Hayes' burning, penetrating gaze with cool, untroubled frankness. In another moment she had turned from him and was earnestly watching Slade, listening to his every word with eager attentiveness.

"You see, I'm a very simple sort of fellow," Slade was saying, "don't drink—don't smoke—don't keep yachts or horses, don't keep a—" he stopped in his oft-repeated formula as he remembered Katherine's presence, "don't keep horses, so I must do something, as I was saying to Mrs. Slade today. I don't want to bother my neighbors, so I'll build high chimneys, so the smoke won't trouble you much. I'm going into the glue business. That is, of course," and he paused and surveyed the group about him with a complacent elevation of his eyebrows, "that is, unless you gentlemen can keep me busy in some other way. I'm a very active man."

Katherine leaned forward with tense expression to see how the man's opponents would take his game. The senator was smiling, Merritt tapping his foot restlessly.

"Are we going to be had?" demanded Merritt, testily, "are we going to stand for this holdup?" and he turned disgustedly toward the door.

"Don't you think we'd better keep Mr. Slade busy in some other way," Strickland repeated.

"I don't," Merritt flung back over his shoulder as he left the room, followed, as usual, by Hunt.

Merritt's hasty departure was the signal for Katherine to adjust her wraps and remark: "We must be late for Trietan."

Hayes followed her. "I must see you alone, Katherine. You're still free—there's no foreigner on the scene, is there, Katherine?"

"Bob," Katherine's voice was sweet but firm. "I don't think I shall ever marry now—"

"Oh, nonsense," he protested.

"No," even more positively. "The more I see of men—but what's the use? There never was but one man I could have got on with, and I didn't happen to live in his time."

"Who was the boy?" Hayes asked, lightly.

"Strange," Katherine replied, pensively, "I've just been talking about him—Napoleon Bonaparte."

"Oh, Lord—that fellow," Hayes was much relieved. "Can I have tomorrow evening?"

"Yes—if you—yes—tomorrow evening, Bob."

Her voice lingered a bit on the Bob, and with quick impulsiveness Hayes caught her hand and kissed it.

In another minute she had turned to Slade.

"Oh, Mr. Slade, won't you let me make a head of you?"

"A head of me?" Slade repeated in surprise.

"Think it over," Katherine suggested, as she and her father went out, leaving Hayes and Slade watching her proud, graceful figure until it disappeared from view.

Slade looked critically at Hayes for a moment or two after the girl had gone.

"Oh, now I remember," he suddenly exclaimed. "You're the chap she gave up for Paris a long time ago?"

"When she was twenty-one and I was twenty-four and six feet one inch of a western lawyer, just out of the woods. How does Mrs. Slade take to this governorship business?" he finished, abruptly.

"She doesn't take to it," Slade's voice was hard.

"I was afraid she wouldn't."

"Well, nobody's going to stand in my way." A malignant light showed in his eyes.

"My boy, I'm out to win."

In spite of the fact that he was in full evening attire, he thrust his hands into his pockets and almost strutted about the room. "I outgeneraled that crowd here tonight. By God, I did! Do you know—?" He paused in his walk and looked down on Hayes' six feet sprawled over one of the broad chairs—"there's just a little drop of that fellow—Napoleon Bonaparte—in me!"

"Napoleon Bonaparte got on by leaving a woman behind," Hayes returned, seriously, refusing to enter into Slade's spirit of self-satisfied good humor.

"You mind your own d—n business, Bob," Slade turned on him, suddenly.

"All right—I'm off to the opera. I only meant that Napoleon was a bad boy for you to follow, because he treated his first wife like a dirty dishrag. That's why I'm glad that second little Austrian hussy paid him back. That's all, I love Mrs. Slade. When I was sick with fever in your mining camp she was a mother to me."

"Don't forget that I made you," Slade reminded him. "I," and he tapped his chest. "I gave you your chance."

"I don't. All the same I'd hate to see you elected, because of Mrs. Slade. It seems to be the regular thing, becoming universal, for a very successful man to leave home the minute he's on his feet. Good night."

"One minute, Bob. You've given me a lot of good advice. I'll give you some. Are you in love with that girl?"

"Yes," Hayes grunted; "good night. Is that all?"

"No," Slade paused, watching Hayes through narrowed eyelids. "That girl needs a large pile with every one of her fingers in it. Bob, I'm sorry for you. Your pile isn't big enough!"

"Well—it's my pile. Good night," and he was gone, both old and young.

After Hayes had gone, Slade sat, his arms resting on the table, staring into space. Every now and then the corners of his mouth came down and his eyes narrowed. He was thinking of Katherine Strickland and Hayes. That woman for Hayes! Hayes must be a presumptuous pup to ever think of winning that queen. Such women were meant for the kings of the earth—not for their hirelings.

Suddenly Slade's eyes lighted with the fire of decision. His mouth became a firm, straight line of determination. There was something implacable and grim in his very attitude as he resolved to win Katherine Strickland became fixed in his mind. He longed to hurry after her—to tell her of his decision to fight, if not with, then for her. He was eager to show her just how much they two together could make out of life, a big, fine fight for position and power.

Even the thought of being governor was left in the distance as plan after plan raced through his mind, of greater conquests and bigger achievements, possible only with a woman like Katherine Strickland for his wife. So absorbed and intense were his thoughts of the future with her for the moment he forgot completely the woman who for 30 years had kept her place as his wife. In all his dealings he had never hesitated or faltered from his newly made resolution.

Mary could go it alone. He would see that she had everything that money could buy. He would make her comfortable and take care of her. That she should be further considered never entered his mind. Always ruthless in his methods, he was equally cruel even when the obstacle to his advancement was a fragile little woman who had given him the best of her love and years and who would gladly have laid down her life to save his.

It was not as if a sudden flame of intensive, overwhelming love for Katherine Strickland had surged through his heart. It was nothing as decent or as fine or as blameless as that. His whole attitude toward the girl was one of cold-blooded acquisition. He had determined to have her just as he had determined only last week to outbid every other man at the rug auction. He wanted her to take a place in his life because he knew what her value would be to him. He wanted her beauty, her brain, her savoir faire, as so many stepping stones by which to mount higher and higher in the affairs of the state and the nation.

In spite of the fact that he criticized his wife's lack of social graces, he was wise enough to know that he was far from a finished product himself. In spite of himself, traces of the parvenu occasionally showed through the veneer of bluff and arrogance. With a wife like Katherine he would soon come to know all the fine points of the social game. A wife like Katherine would cover up a multitude of his little sins of commission and omission.

As a Paymaster Herzog Is a Great Ball Player.

NICKALLS HOLDS HIS JOB.

Yale Crew Coach Denies Rumor of Resignation—Dibble, Canadian Crack, Is After Diamond Sculls—France Now Going Mad Over Baseball—Dates For Sonder Trials Are Settled.

Garry Herrmann regards Charley Herzog as a great manager and ball player, but a decided failure as a paymaster. "Herzie" volunteered to take care of the paying off job at Redland field, and his offer was accepted. When pay day arrived Charley got the checks, sat down at his roll top desk and waited for the players.

The first detachment to arrive consisted of six Reds. While Herzog was thumbing the checks to get the first one the phone rang, and Herzog was called away. Before he returned the athletes had looked over the checks, and they knew what every player on the team was getting. The news spread and soon every player knew the salary of every other player.

This caused some loud wailing. Many came to a speedy conclusion that they were being underpaid while lesser stars were getting plenty of money. Herrmann was the Mr. Sweeney to whom the tales were told. It is not known whether any salaries were raised, but Herzog is paymaster no more.

Guy Nickalls, the English crew coach, is still in charge of the Yale varsity rowing squad and has branded the story that he had resigned as an "infamous lie." He stated that he would take the Yale oarsmen to Gales Ferry and believed that they would make an excellent showing against Harvard.

It is known that differences of opinion in matters of stroke and boat rigging have arisen among the Yale crew coaches and rowing committee members.

Nickalls' recommendation is that English built oars, horizontal slides and those pin outriggers be used as shell rigging has, however, been discarded, and the eight now rows with shells which are rigged with American oarlocks and inclined slides.

Robert Dibble of the Don Rowing club, Toronto, single sculling champion of the United States and Canada, is in London preparing for the Royal English Henley regatta, where he will try to lift the Diamond Sculls. The race is scheduled for July 1 to 4. In his final trial race in Toronto he rowed a mile in 5 minutes 55½ seconds.

Great interest has been aroused in the French press over the introduction of baseball in France. The Paris edition of the Daily Mail is now boosting the league, while the Auto, a leading sporting daily, is devoting long articles to the advantages of the game and its necessity in French athletic life.

The first game of the season at Colombes race track between the Latin quarter and Racing club nines drew a big crowd and resulted in a victory for the Racing club, 11 to 7.

Under the coaching of Dr. Valadier, an old Harvard player, the French teams are working hard, and, according to the press, there are likely to be several thousand fans present for the series.

Sam Richards, the Boston distance swimmer, who is to meet Charles Durborrow of Philadelphia in a special race on the Delaware river soon, has been presented with a solid gold medal by the New England Athletic Association Amateur union.

It is in recognition of his record breaking performance from the Battery to Sandy Hook last year at New York.

The indoor swimming season offered rather conclusive evidence of the superiority of the trudgeon crawl stroke over all others now used in this country, for it enabled Harry Heber, Perry McGillivray and Joseph Wheatley to create a number of national and world's records. Furthermore, they were the only ones to establish new marks. To the casual observer there may be a striking dissimilarity in the action of the three men, but the careful analyst will realize at once that this dissimilarity, due to varying individual characteristics, is a matter of detail and not of fundamentals.

It is now generally admitted that in the several types of crawl obtaining the action of the arms is identical, and that the distinguishing factor between them is the leg drive. Considering, then, that Heber, McGillivray and Wheatley all three show a well marked scissor kick at the end of the top arm pull, then follow it with a more or less vigorous fluttering of the feet, kept up until the time comes for another scissor, it becomes obvious that in spite of seeming differences they really exhibit the same principles. The trudgeon crawl was developed a few years ago by Frank Sullivan of Chicago, who thought that by introducing a narrow scissor kick (like that of the trudgeon) into the even less thrash of the true crawl more speed could be obtained. Everything now points to the correctness of the theory.

JOEL WINS $25,000 OAKS.

English Stake Known as Ladies' Derby First Run in 1779.

J. H. Joel's brown filly Princess Dorrie won the Oaks stakes, known as the "Ladies' Derby," Lord Carnarvon's Wastfliss was second and Sir John Thursty's Torchlight third. There were twenty-one starters.

The Oaks, which has been run every year since 1779, is an event for three-year-old fillies and is valued at $25,000. The course is one and a half miles in length. For this year's race there were originally 300 entries.

THE SECRET OF A STAGE SUCCESS

Strange and Romantic Experience of an Actress.

Heloise Garnier was playing with a Parisian dramatic company at Geneva, Mlle. Garnier was by no means the leading woman. Indeed, her part was lady's maid, and all she had to say during the performance was, "I think the count very handsome." Nor was Mlle. Garnier pretty or distinguished looking.

On the last night that the company performed at Geneva Mlle. Garnier was surprised at receiving a card on which was engraved the name "Caspar Pearson." There was also written in pencil, "I shall esteem it a favor if Mlle. Garnier will permit me to thank her in person for the pleasure she has given me."

Not only was mademoiselle, but the rest of the company, astonished. None of the principal actresses had received such a compliment. Mlle. Garnier at once became an important personage in their eyes. Caspar Pearson was admitted behind the scenes. He appeared to be a young man of respectability. He was deferential to the lady, to whom he had taken a fancy, and after the play his father, who was in the theater, sent mademoiselle an invitation to sup at the family home.

OFFICE OF 'FURIES' RAIDED BY POLICE

Arrest Four Women and Seize Incriminating Papers.

HIGH WAGES FOR BURNING

Detectives Get List of Contributors and Criminal Prosecutions May Be Started.

London, June 10.—Scotland Yard raided a secret headquarters of the militant suffragettes on Tuthill street, Westminster, from which the "Furies" have been directing their campaign of destruction and retaliation since the offices of the Woman's Social and Political Union was placed under police surveillance.

As the result of evidence discovered in the raid four women were arrested and were arraigned on the charge of conspiracy. They are Emmeline Hall, Nellie Hall, Helen Arnes and Julia Jameson.

During the hearing they attacked the wardresses and policemen, biting, kicking and scratching them. They howled at the judge and had to be restrained from upsetting the counsel table.

The detectives seized many papers and books, some of which contained the names of those who have been contributing to the militant campaign fund. It is said that criminal prosecutions will be started at once against these persons.

Documents were also found containing plans for burning buildings and committing other outrages and showing that high rewards were being paid for carrying them out.

Fifty detectives took part in the raid, surrounding the building so that none of the occupants could escape. The women had cleverly disguised the nature of the offices and it was only by accident that the Scotland Yard men found the place. They were on the trail of a well known militant leader, who was suspected of being in a plot to do personal violence to the king, when she led them to the building.

The police did not act at once, but waited until a number of women were in the offices. Word had reached the police that the militants had planned a desperate demonstration at the state ball at Buckingham Palace, with the intention of disrupting this aristocratic function. It is believed that details of the plot were worked out at the Tuthill street place.

Ravages of the "Furies" have aroused public feeling to such an extent that it is expected the session of parliament, which has just begun, will take action designed to curb the growing violence of the women.

One of the peculiar features of the suffrage situation is the attitude now adopted by many clergymen. Destruction of church edifices and interruption of services have worked up the clergy to such a state of wrath that many have written open letters to the press advocating that militants be allowed to starve themselves to death in prison if they so desire.

"Portrait of a Boy" Destroyed.
Birmingham, Eng., June 10.—A suffragette vandal, armed with a butcher's cleaver, destroyed the "Portrait of a Boy," by George Romney, in the Birmingham Art Gallery. When arrested she gave the name of Miss Ryland. The picture, which was valued at $10,000, was one of several paintings of boys which brought fame to the artist. He is best known in America for his painting, "The Death of Wolfe."

DIVA WINS DIVORCE

Mme. Schumann-Heink's Matrimonial
Bonds Again Severed.

Chicago, June 10.—Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, the singer, won her divorce from William Rapp, Jr., in court here.

Judge Sullivan sustained a motion made by the diva's attorneys and directed the jury to find for the plaintiff.

William Rapp, Jr., lawyer husband of Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink and author of the "Dearest Nonnie" love letters, conceded before court recovered that the prima donna had won her suit for divorce.

Rapp's defense was shattered absolutely when his attorneys were barred from going into the singer's past. It seems that Rapp cut off such questions as his counsel sought to put by the nature of his answer to the complaint.

WEALTHY MEXICANS FLEE FROM CAPITAL

Their Flight Indicates the Collapse of Huerta.

Vera Cruz, Mex., June 10.—A special train from Mexico City brought many very wealthy Mexicans on their way abroad, and this, stronger than anything else that has appeared, indicates the final collapse of the Huerta government and to American expert observers and Mexicans at Vera Cruz.

Members of the great ruling families of five years ago, the land owners, the científicos of the Diaz regime, have come to the conclusion that it was time to abandon their estates and flee.

They have clung persistently all along to the hope that the provisional government could save something out of the wreck for them, and they have contributed of their large means to the many local loans that have been made. They were the great resource of Huerta.

Since they have deserted the capital it is the opinion that one more important train can leave the capital, and that will bring Huerta himself. The Mexicans who came out beg that their names be withheld from any quotation, but they agree in this one important thing: A fair election in Mexico is impossible now and will be impossible in the near future unless it is supervised by the United States.

POSSE HUNTS ASSAILANT

Joins Police in Search For Man Who Attacked Girl of 12.

Pottsville, Pa., June 10.—Attacked a short distance from her home while on an errand, Anna, the twelve-year-old daughter of Richard Powell, of East Mines, was the victim of an assault by a man for whom the police and a posse are searching.

A detail of Troop C of the state constabulary is hunting through the woods for miles around, and it is believed will soon capture the assailant, said to be a tramp about thirty-five years old.

The little girl, after she broke away, dragged herself home and dropped exhausted into her mother's arms.

A posse of citizens is assisting in the man hunt, and vengeance is threatened if the assailant falls into their hands before the police get him.

STARS DON'T EARN THEIR SALARIES

Cobb and Speaker Getting

TY DEMANDS TOO MUCH.

"Georgia Peach" Must Be Coddled and Catered to More Than Any Other
Ball Player—This Is Willing to Work
His Hardest at All Times—Deserves
More of the Tax.

There does not seem to be any scarcity of ball players for the major leagues. While great players will always be scarce, athletes of average quality and drawing fancy salaries are thicker than flies in berry time.

Recently at Fenway park, in Boston, before the game there were twenty-six players in Detroit traveling uniforms, while twenty-two wore the Boston regalla. Here were forty-eight ball players drawing down total salaries of over $200,000 for six months' work, two men in the party—Ty Cobb and Ty Cobb—receiving $25,000 for one season, and up to the present time both men are playing far below their natural speed, showing the long chances that club owners must take with their high priced performers.

If either Speaker or Cobb could guarantee to play up to his very best form he would be worth every dollar that his contract calls for, for the reason that both men are exceptionally brilliant all around performers, and, while the "Georgia Peach" manages to keep in the public eye, he is not the man for a ball team that is Tris Speaker, for Cobb loves to retire from the game when things are not going to his liking and seems to be allowed to do it at will.

Ty Cobb loves the limelight. No player ever sought applause and played to the gallery equal to this star performer. Mr. Cobb comes under the same head as the famous grand opera artists, who love to be coddled and catered to. The Tiger management is forced to handle this man as they would a fine porcelain vase, because they cannot afford to lose his services on the ball field.

While it can be appreciated why these grinning cards expect enormous salaries, it is difficult to fully appreciate how the common, ordinary herd of ball players can feel they are entitled to the princely salaries that professional ball players are now receiving, even during a season that is bound to prove financial failure for at least 75 per cent of the leagues in this country today.

There is no other line of business more uncertain than baseball. Just at a time when everything seems running smoothly some unlooked for trouble crops up and destroys the picture. Then, again, when a team is going strong and the local fans are enthusiastic over the club's success the boys commence to slip and drift toward the bottom, killing all chances once more of winning a championship.

Baseball clubs in the major leagues, having the pick of 20,000 young players, always have a chance to furnish a surprise for the home fans, and the fan never gives up hope of having his team hit a winning streak. If the baseball fans were not loyal to the game there would be no fancy salaries for the players. In fact, the boys would be playing in rich luck if they had their expenses paid for traveling around the country in princely style, so it's to the fans after all that we owe thanks for the magnificent baseball plants erected in most of the large cities to the glory of our national game.

Unless the crowds display real enthusiasm for the home club's success it is time for the management to figure on a change of players, for there is sure to come a time when even the best of individual players become tiresome to the fans, which is generally resented by the player.

MUSICAL HEADS AND FACES.

They Have a Shape All Their Own,
Says a German Scientist.

That all musicians are "freaks," so far as their physical appearance goes, is the opinion of Dr. Paul Solin, the German scientist. Not only this, but he finds that, regardless of their race or nationality, all persons of marked musical ability show a close resemblance to one another in the shape of their heads and faces. The head and countenance of the typical musician often look very much like those of the lion or the sphinx.

The peculiar shape of a musician's head is due, Dr. Solin believes, to the gradual expansion of the sound center of his brain and the consequent change in the conformation of his skull. This is why the heads of Wagner, Beethoven, Robert Schumann, Richard Strauss, and other great musicians all have an eccentric, abnormal and sometimes fantastic appearance. A musician's sound center develops abnormally because it is there that everything in his life finds its motive.

The musical head and face are of a primitive type, because musical genius is a reversion to the time when men communicated their ideas by means of more or less inarticulate sounds. But, although the musician's physical appearance is barbarous in its lack of beauty and regularity, it contains no hint of degeneracy.

The typical musical head is characterized by the horizontal breadth of the forehead, the broad nose and chin and the wide, extremely mobile mouth. The brow often overhangs greatly, as was so notably the case with Beethoven. The eyes are lustrous, but bear a separated, dreamy expression. The hands are broad and strong.

"Musicians," says Dr. Solin, "are absolute slaves to their sense of sound, and it is this that not only affects their physical appearance, but makes them mentally so nervous and excitable. The main feature of the musical intellect is that mental excitement seeks a different outlet from that in the case of ordinary men."—New York American.

MARK TWAIN AS A LINGUIST.

His Grim Vow After He Firmly Decided to Learn French.

When Mark Twain was a young reporter, working on the San Francisco Call, he made up his mind to learn the French language. He did not want to go to the expense of a teacher, and so he bought a grammar and conversation book and set to work. Before breakfast he pored over the lessons; late in the evening he was at it again, and every available moment of the day he employed with equal assiduity.

He soon began to look about for opportunities to make use of his new accomplishment. Accordingly he began to eat at a French restaurant once a week.

One day as he and his roommate were coming out of the restaurant they found on the sidewalk just outside the door a Frenchman. He was asking first one passerby and then another the way to a certain street, but no one understood him. That was Mark's chance. The Frenchman looked at him with wistful eyes and began to talk. Mark listened attentively. Three or four times the stranger was compelled to repeat his question, then Mark seemed to catch his drift. But he had scarcely spoken half a dozen words in reply, when the Frenchman fell to the sidewalk in a dead faint.

The true cause of the stranger's fainting may never be known. Very likely he was furnished, and perhaps he had been put out of this very restaurant because of his seedy appearance. But, whatever the cause, the joke was on Mark for once. Mark's roommate was careful enough of his friendship not to tell the incident at the office of the Morning Call, but he teased the rising humorist a good deal about it. When the fun had lasted long enough Mark set his jaw, and with unlimited determination written on his features announced, "I'll learn French if it kills every Frenchman in the country!"—Youth's Companion.

Why a Lake Is Like a Person.

A lake resembles a living being in many ways. It has a pulse. Its surface rises and falls rhythmically. It has a circulation. Its water not only ebbs and flows, but there are undercurrents by which the life giving oxygen is carried to organisms which dwell in its depths. It does muscular work. The shores are eroded, and wharves are moved by the ice pressure. It digests food, and some lakes, and to say sometimes have indigestion. And so we might continue the comparison and tell of its smiles and frowns and the music of its waves upon the shore.—Atlantic Monthly.

It appears to have been a story of adventure of the most exciting kind. "There was a man in it and a tiger," Sir Arthur said. "I forget which of the two was the hero of the story, but it didn't matter which because about the time the tiger met the man they became blended into one!"

The six follies of science are the squaring of the circle, perpetual motion, the philosopher's stone, the elixir of life, magic and astrology. Dainty Lightweight Affairs to Wear With Washable Gowns.

ATTRACTIVE JACKET.

The dainty wash gown shown here is fashioned of cotton crepe in a plain and striped fabric. A stylish effect is achieved by the use of the short flared peplum. The little jacket with the long shoulder lines is caught together in front with a ribbon bow and buckle. It is short in front and slopes down to a moderate length in the back.

Coats of the Norfolk type are very popular this season. The fullness of the coat from the yoke to the collar edge is gathered in at the shoulders, is fitted smoothly under the arms and confined at the waist under a fairly broad belt made of the coat material. Large patch pockets are a most necessary detail which should never be omitted. They will hold without undue weighting various little accessories which will be found handy to possess when indulging in cross country walking.

A SPLENDID OPPORTUNITY

On the Fourth of July

By JOHN Y. LARNED

It was predicted when the Declaration of Independence was promulgated on July 4, 1776, that the anniversary of the day would be celebrated with the firing of cannon and such explosive demonstrations of joy. The prediction has been fulfilled to the present day, but during the past quarter century the old Independence day passed away forever. The day is now most fittingly celebrated by recalling the struggle which made good the assertion of the American people. Here is a story of the Revolution:

New Jersey was the principal battleground of the Revolution. The region between New York and Philadelphia was a great deal of the time debatable ground. The British occupied New York city and, for a portion of the time, Philadelphia. Washington stationed himself on the heights of Morristown, between the two cities, but much nearer New York than Philadelphia. Over the lower ground, from Trenton to Jersey City, couriers were galloping, spies were lurking and a stray soldier wearing the red or the blue was moving on some errand.

Some five miles southwest of Newark, where the city of Orange now stands, was the residence of a Tory named Wardle. His daughter, Virginia, had two suitors, the one a British, the other an American officer, Edgar Plimpton, the redecoat, was with General Howe at New York, and since the army of occupation had little to do the young Englishman made frequent excursions to visit the lady he loved, while Alan Trowbridge, who was at Morristown, rode in the opposite direction and about the same distance on a similar errand.

Either one of these officers was liable to fall into the hands of some reconnoitering or foraging party of the side against which he fought. Then, too, it was quite possible that they might meet at the Wardle mansion.

One night (it was the Fourth of July, by the way) Lieutenant Trowbridge, descending the Orange mountain, galloped through the valley between him and the Wardles and drew up before the gate. Without waiting to be admitted he stalked into the house, to find Miss Virginia in the drawing room. She was evidently much perturbed. Trowbridge asked her if he had come inopportunistically, if he had not better leave, but to all such questions she gave unsatisfactory replies. Nevertheless, throughout the whole of his visit she appeared at ease, and he found himself obliged to do nearly all the talking, the young lady confining herself to monosyllables.

Trowbridge knew of the attentions of Captain Plimpton and had come to her to ask her to decide between himself and the Britisher. He began a little speech he had arranged to that effect, but Virginia, showing signs of still greater embarrassment, endeavored to check him. He persisted and just as he finished with the words "decide now between him and me" a closet door opened and his rival stepped forth in the dress of a citizen, none of the kind, he said, "I prefer not to be played in the position of eavesdropper. Rather, I would hear my doom openly."

"How comes it, captain," said Trowbridge, "that you are so near the American lines and not in uniform? Are you aware that if caught as you are you are liable to be treated as a spy?"

He had no sooner spoken the words than there was the sound of horses' hoofs without and through the window they could see a dozen Continental troopers at the gate. An officer dismounted and coming up to the door which stood open walked into the hall. Looking into the living room he saw the two men and the girl. To Trowbridge, in whom he recognized a patriot officer, he said:

"Pardon me, sir, for entering unannounced, but I have been told that a British spy was in this neighborhood and since this house is occupied by notorious Tories I am likely to find him here."

"There is no spy on these premises," replied Trowbridge. "I give you my word for that."

The officer looked suspiciously at Plimpton. "I fear," he said, "that I shall have to ask this gentleman to give an account of himself."

Plimpton was about to speak—to declare his identity—when Trowbridge stopped him.

"I have vouched for the gentleman," he said. "That should be enough."

"Who is he?"

"I have told you that he is not a spy."

"Nevertheless I must satisfy myself of that."

"Leave this house, sir."

"On what authority?"

"By order of the commander in chief, I am Lieutenant Trowbridge of his staff."

"Pardon me, lieutenant," said the other, and, turning, he rejoined his troopers, and they all rode away.

Then followed an impressive tableau. Virginia, turning to Captain Plimpton, took his hand in both of hers, looking him steadfastly in the eyes. Then she turned, and throwing her arms about Trowbridge, her head fell on his breast.

"I do not blame you," said the captain. "I only regret that I might not at least have been given an opportunity to do so noble an action."

Without another word he left the house and never saw Virginia Wardle again.

QUALITY AND PRICE

When you buy a piece of furniture or a carpet for your home, the first cost is the whole cost. When you buy a refrigerator it is the ice cost and not the first cost you should consider. The poorer a refrigerator is made, the more ice it will use and waste.

Better pay a few dollars more and take an Automatic. It will save this difference on your ice bills every year you use it, and beyond this, consideration of first cost and ice cost is the fact that Automatics will give you the greatest service—keeping your foods wholesome and very cold and dry.
